Book Nook

Notes from Mrs. M & the Library!

There are different types of questions to ask if your child is reading fiction books or nonfiction books.

Types of questions that parents can ask their children when they bring home nonfiction books are:

- Did you find any new words that you didn't know?
- What questions would you ask the author about things you wanted to know?
- Did you see things like charts, diagrams, or pictures that helped you.

Preschool: We remembered the things that the snowmen did from the book Snowmen at Night and then we put them in 1,2,3 order. The 3 year old group heard the story Alright all ready! Remember to bring books back please Kindergarten: We started to learn what authors need to have in their stories. We call it the beginning, middle and end of the story.

1st Grade: We reviewed the parts of a book. Then they did a worksheet on the basic parts of a book.

2nd Grade: We reviewed the different vocabulary of the dictionary. Then we looked a real dictionary to see where these items were located.

3rd Grade: We reviewed the reasons why authors write books. Then they cut and pasted some paragraphs under inform, persuade, and entertain.

4th Grade: They will sort through some main ideas and put them in the right groups.

5/6 Grade: We finished the fables and they were awesome. We will look at how Nonfiction is organized in the library. They will learn why it is organized that we.

7/8 Grade: They are working on editing their reports. They then picked out books to read.

Why did the librarian slip and fall?

He was in the non- friction section .
